Extracurricular weekday activities of university and college students in the Uff.

The main target of this report is to find out the most and the least popular activities among students of university or college on an average weekday and to compare the results of questioning in 2014 and 2015. /50

There is a tendency of students trying to catch on sleep they lack during the week because of college or university, which proved itself during the questioning: sleeping turned out to be the most popular activity on a weekday. Grooming turned out to be the least popular activity. ?

However, there are some differences between the results of 2014 and the results of 2015 that need to be mentioned. For example, the amount of time students spent on sports and leisure increased. In 2015 students spent almost 6 hours on sports rather than 4 hours in 2014. Traveling became a lot more popular compared to 2014. Unfortunately, the amount of time used on educational activities reduced in 2015. Tendency of spending time on eating and drinking leveled up in 2015, but not that much. The amount of time spent on work stayed the same during 2014 and 2015. /50

All in all, sleeping stays the most popular activity on a weekday, while grooming is still the least popular activity among students. Even though there are some obvious changes in the results, there are also things that don't differ from each other as the times go by. 244
