"Introducing "Computer Based Games for English Learners" to our school.

• Introduction

gr. 3 months ago our school had got the opportunity to use a free 'Computer Based Games for English Learners' (CBGEL) version. It had been decided to let students
gr. of 10-11th forms be the first ones to try it. 70 students
voc. in common took part in the experiment. They made various exercises at school and at home lep

English Learners

4 groups of 10th form students worked on grammar. gr
They did it in class with their teacher. As a result the students fully understood the new material, made only a few mistakes, much less than in a usual paper test.

voc. 3 groups of form 11 students made the task at sp
gr. home. They worked on vocabulary with a multiple voc. choice exersises. The result of repeating material connected with idioms, phrasal verbs, synonyms and gr gr antonyms is better understanding and remembering gr of vocabulary, less mistakes in school tests.

YOU CAN USE THE REVERSE SIDE

What students think of "CBGEL"

The experiment showed that using programme in class for learning new material makes students "excited", as they say. GR
The game helps them not only to understand such a difficult thing as grammar, but also do it with pleasure. GR

"So during a lesson we can learn and have fun at the same time. Incredible!"

Ana, 16

The feelings of students practising on their owns are GR extremely different. They think that doing at home the same thing they usually do in class "doesn't make sense". So they call is "boring". GR

Conclusion

275

As a result of the experiment we can see that "CBGEL" can be highly effective. It is recommended to install the programme on a long-term period for usage in class.
