I have come to notice that through the years the main focus of the USA students shifted drastically. Through assessing gathered data we can see that in the year 2014 American students dedicated a bit more time to sleeping. An extra hour was also used for other activities. Extra curricular hours were ~~se~~ used for educational activities. In the year 2015 we can see how education became less popular. ~~Extra~~ hours were put into traveling to catch on the latest trends in resort areas such as Vietnam or Cuba, also more time was being spent on sports as students needed to pursue the physical form they wanted. We also can see that two and a half hours were taken from other activities as they ~~proven~~ had proven to be almost non-productive thus suffering in popularity. Time used for sleeping lost one hour as students now needed to get up earlier in order to save an hour. That one hour was put into eating and drinking to provide the nutrition needed for sports and other activities. From this report we can see that sports rose in popularity, which is good, but hours used for educational activities dropped. I think it is of utmost importance for students of the USA to put a substitute of hours into educational activities as educated young people are needed to support the wellbeing of the United States.
