Computer Based Games for English Learners.
Research Report.

Main Information.

In October 2014 we were given a number of special games, produced by ABC Company, for a free trial. Students from forms ten-eleven were separated on groups and were using these games for one month.

Two Programs.

We decided to create different learning programs for students so they would not be able to help each other. Form ten students were working in their classes with teachers and their main goal was to study a new material such as "Indirect Questions" and "Modal Verbs". Form eleven students were working at home drilling the learned material; "Phrasal Verbs" and "Synonyms/Antonyms". Types of exercises were different too: form ten students had to fill the gaps with appropriate words while form eleven students had to choose between given words.

Results and advices for future

gr

All groups of students achieved success in their tasks and stopped making old mistakes, but older students were not excited about tasks as much as younger students were, mainly because they had to work with the learned material and individually.

Here are advices about what should be changed in future:

Firstly, form eleven students should work together in classes with their teachers.

gr(s)

And secondly, we need to change the interface of games, because now it is directed on younger students.

dex

We are happy with the results and really looking forward to repeat this experiment later.
